Want to fade to black? Used transitions to fade to the next scene! What is a video transition? A video transition is a sequence of images that plays between the clips in a video clip. A video transition is a frame sequence, where each frame corresponds to one second of time. Want to practice video editing? Watch videos, copy the source videos, and paste them into your timeline, where you can add transitions and titles to them. Video editing is the process of editing video in a video editor. There are some different ways of editing. The most common way is to use the timeline. The timeline is where you can add audio and video clips. The timeline is the most common way of editing, but there are some other ways of editing, such as using the Project panel or the Elements panel. When you add an audio or video clip to the timeline, the clip is added as a new layer. The layers can be moved in the timeline or duplicated. Each layer can be moved independently and if a clip is duplicated, the duplicated clips has the same attributes as the original. To make a new clip, simply drag one of the existing clips to the timeline or select the clip from the project panel. Edit transitions on the timeline The video transitions are also called video clips or video transitions. There are two kinds of transitions: Transitions between the video clips Transitions between the audio and video clips You can add transitions to individual clips or to the entire clip. Let's have a look at them: Transitions between the video clips. The clip from the left is from a video that has been edited. The clip from the right is from a video that has not been edited. The transitions between the video clips let you add a transition between the clips. You can choose from a variety of transitions, such as fade, dissolve, wipe, and so on. There are three ways of adding transitions to video clips: Insert transitions on individual clips Insert transitions on individual clips. The clip from the left is from a video that has been edited. The clip from the right is from a video that has not been edited. The video clip in the middle is from the original video. Insert transitions on individual clips.
